

I wonder – have you run across expressions of this desire for a God who is tangible and substantial perhaps among Christians of your acquaintance, or perhaps even in your own heart? This desire in its various forms can be deadly! It tends to draw believers away from the living God and toward idols. We need to guard against this tendency and resist them when they arise, especially in our own hearts. We need to renew our trust in the living God day by day, and to find all of our satisfaction and our fulfillment and our joy in Him.